I had found a particular case where swiping (ADB shell input touchscreen swipe ...) to unlock the home screen doesn't work. More exactly for Acer Z160 and Acer S57. The phones are history but still, they need to be taken into consideration by us developers. Here is the code source that solved my problem. I had made my app to start with the device and in the "onCreate" function I had changed temporarily the lock type. Also, just in case google drive does something to the zip file I will post fragments of that code below. AndroidManifest: class ServiceStarter: BroadcastReceiver() { @SuppressWarnings("CommitPreEdits") override fun onReceive(context: Context?, intent: Intent?) { Log.d("EMY ", "Calling onReceive") context?.let { Log.i("EMY ", "Received action: ${intent!!.getAction()}"), user unlocked: " + UserManagerCompat.isUserUnlocked(context)) val sp = it.getSharedPreferences("EMY ", Context.MODE_PRIVATE) sp.edit().putString(MainActivity.MY_KEY, "M-am activat asa cum trebuie!") if (intent!!.getAction().equals(Intent.ACTION_BOOT_COMPLETED)) { val i = Intent(it, MainActivity::class.java).addFlags(Intent.FLAG_ACTIVITY_NEW_TASK) it.startActivity(i) } } } class MainActivity : AppCompatActivity() { companion object { const val MY_KEY="MY_KEY" } override fun onCreate(savedInstanceState: Bundle?) { super.onCreate(savedInstanceState) setContentView(R.layout.activity_main) val kgm = getSystemService(Context.KEYGUARD_SERVICE) as KeyguardManager val kgl = kgm.newKeyguardLock(MainActivity::class.java.simpleName) if (kgm.inKeyguardRestrictedInputMode()) { kgl.disableKeyguard() } if (Build.VERSION.SDK_INT >= Build.VERSION_CODES.M) { requestPermissions(arrayOf(Manifest.permission.RECEIVE_BOOT_COMPLETED), 1234) } else { afisareRezultat() } } override fun onRequestPermissionsResult(requestCode: Int, permissions: Array, grantResults: IntArray) { if(1234 == requestCode) { afisareRezultat() } super.onRequestPermissionsResult(requestCode, permissions, grantResults) } private fun afisareRezultat() { Log.d("EMY ", "Calling afisareRezultat") val sp = getSharedPreferences("EMY ", Context.MODE_PRIVATE); val raspuns = sp.getString(MY_KEY, "Doesn't exists") Log.d("EMY ", "AM primit: ${raspsuns}") sp.edit().remove(MY_KEY).apply() } } July 2021 updatedowngrading from 5 stars to 4 stars.Discovered a mechanical design issue / compatibility with after market batteries.Most aftermarket batteries (and may be the original one) swell a little bit before they need to be replaced.That swelling moves out the back plane of the phone away from the electronic contacts.That, in turn, causes the GPS to stop working (because the contacts now are not connecting the GPS antenna to the rest of the electronics).LG tried very hard to keep the phone slim, while allowing replaceable battery.It would be much better if the small battery swell would not cause the electronics failure in this way.On the other hand, if you had an after market battery for a year a so, and it is loosing charge, and then your GPS stops working -- that's your sign to replace the battery.---May 2017, update. Upgrading to 5 stars from 3 stars.LG updated the phone to Android 7 from 6. I am hugely impressed. Normally this does not happen and manufactures want you to buy new phone. LG clearly stands behind their product. An upgrade like this is not a patch, it requires significant development and testing effort.All the functions of the phone also after almost a year of use, are perfect. Glad I got this rather than other brands.--July, 2016.Major problem: even if you have an SD card installed, the LG G5 does not allow you to move apps to SD storage. For apps that rely on large map files (eg GPS apps) this is a major problem, as you will eat lots of space out of the 32GB very quickly.What's disappointing, is that Android Marshmellow 6.0 OS, allows to treat the SD card as part of main internal storage, transparently. However LG decided to disable this option, and does not allow customers to enable it back in any way. Samsung S7 at least lets you move the apps to SD storage.Otherwise the phone sofar has been good, camera with the 2 lenses is exceptionally good.Always-on screen is a bit too dim.Fingerprint scanner works really well.[update aug-19, 2016]; LG G5 bluetooth is really good. First, the range is quite long, at least 30-40 longer than any of my laptops.Second The bluetooth chip on the phone supports APT-X. Which makes senificant difference in music sound quality if you have APT-X enabled headphones. 3rd, it supports the new APT-X HD (not every qualcom 820 based phone supports this). This APT-X HD paired with APT-X HD headphones (LG sells those) -- would make the sound quality, especially from lossless-compress music files (eg FLAC/APE) -- even higher quality and no lag. I do not have APT-X HD headphones, so cannot compare. But listening via APT-X headphones -- the sound quality via LG G5 bluetooth is very very good. It would be remiss to look too far ahead but the hard facts state Rangers are 90 minutes away from a first appearance in the Champions League group stage in 12 years. A sizeable task awaits in the form of PSV Eindhoven at their patch awaits, however, a signaturas win on the Continent has become the calling card of the Ibrox side in recent years. And if Rangers punch their £40million ticket that guarantees them a seat at European football's top table, they will receive fresh impetus in the transfer market. Managing director Stewart Robertson laid out how last season's rousing run to the Europa League resulted in a greater money haul than reaching the Champions League group stage last season. But entering the world's most coveted tournament is good for business when reaching marquee Finals on a yearly basis remains a tall task. Gio van Bronckhorst hasn't stood still this summer and he and sporting director Ross Wilson have been busy with seven summer signings. Malik Tillman, Antonio Colak, Tom Lawrence and Rabbi Matondo have added an oomph in the final third and it is hoped Ridvan Yilmaz, Ben Davies and John Souttar can bring something to the backline. But what would come next if Ruud van Nistelrooy's side are left wanting in front of their own fans next week? Record Sport runs the rule over where it's believed Rangers are aiming to strengthen as we understand the club will move for two type of players should the UEFA riches be unlocked. Defensive midfielder On the face of it, a player to play at the base of the Rangers midfield doesn't appear an obvious first place to start. But when you consider the two starting in the engine room alongside John Lundstram has chopped and changed this season, it may well be a place where the Dutchman and his signing chief start. The Scouser is a bonafide cult hero who had added to his Ibrox lore with a string of head-turning displays on the Continent. But Glen Kamara hasn't been a guaranteed starter this season with Scott Arfield and Steven Davis earning a shot each in the European clashes with Union Saint-Gilloise and PSV. Kamara has been linked with Serie A side Salernitana but would likely command a hefty fee with three years remaining on his current Ibrox deal. (Image: Getty Images) Ryan Jack has also been left with a watching brief for much of the early parts of the season. The Scotland international has been an unused substitute in three of the Ibrox side's six competitive games. He was subbed after 67 minutes during a chastening night in Leuven during the first leg against USG. He was reduced to a six-minute cameo on the opening day against Livingston but played the full game against St Johnstone in last Saturday's 4-0 cruise at Ibrox. There's a clear sign the midfield dynamic is shifting under van Bronckhst and that is likely be reinforced with a trip into the market if they reach the Champions League. A fresh forward Sometimes there are good personnel problems to have and being able to leave Alfredo Morelos in reserve fits that criteria. The Rangers boss shut down an inquiry over why the Colombian didn't come off the bench against PSV and the Dutchman insisted Colak's efforts afforded him the chance to see out the game. If Morelos pens a new contract then the prospect of signing a new No.9 would be highly unlikely. But teams who play a 4-3-3 are always seeking players who can play in multiple positions across the frontline. Take the aforementioned Tillman, for example. The Bayern Munich loanee has played here there and everywhere during his fledgling career. The USA international appears at his best just behind the striker, but he has played from both the right and left for club plus country over the past 18 months. Alfredo Morelos Ryan Kent appears entrenched as the left winger for now and likely the long-term man if he - in the same situation as Morelos - agree fresh terms which will take their contracts beyond next summer. The right side of the front three appears up for grabs. Both Tillman and Lawrence can start on that side and Scott Wright is also on the mix for game time. But a bonafide wide man who makes the position is something that could be of interest to Rangers. A wild card? Rangers sparked a manic transfer deadline day in January with their box office capture of Aaron Ramsey. It was a move which had gleaming Kris Boyd proclaiming it as the Scottish football's biggest signing since Paul Gascoigne. But, in truth, it already appeared like a gamble which hadn't paid off long before the Welshman missed the decisive penalty in the Europa League Final. (Image: Getty Images) But the Ibrox side are unlikely to be dented if another marquee deal presents itself, however, both Wilson and van Bronckhorst have a recent reminder over the pitfalls that come with going all in for a world star. Ramsey's chequered injury history didn't ease in Glasgow, so that is worth bearing in mind when it comes to future big business. Also, Rangers will try to sign a player or two even if they don't make the Champions League. However, that is dependent on offloading the likes of Nikola Katic and Stephen Kelly, with Jack Simpson already gone. READ NEXT
